USC Libraries Scriptor Award

The annual Scriptor Award honors each year's most accomplished adaptation of the printed word into a feature film. Scriptor is the only award of its kind to celebrate screenwriters alongside the authors of original books, stories, articles, plays, and other written work upon which screenwriters base their adaptations.

Scriptor has honored Joel and Ethan Coen, P.D. James, Aaron Sorkin, Michael Chabon, and many more writers and screenwriters. Find the complete list of Scriptor winners and more information on joining us for this year's gala at: www.usc.edu/libraries/friends.

Literary Happenings

Through our program of Friends Literary Luncheons and Literary Evenings, we bring writers and scholars, artists and curators, and scientists and physicians to our libraries for intimate events with our community. The Friends also create opportunities for students to engage scholars and artists by sponsoring their attendance.

Exhibition Openings and Curator Tours

USC Libraries' exhibition series showcase our collections and the many ways they inform and enrich scholarly and creative endeavors at USC and beyond. Recent exhibitions have included Trillion$ in partnership with the United States Federal Reserve, and Collecting the Cosmos, a multimedia collaboration with the Jet Propulsion Laboratory and Los Angeles-based artists that explored questions of collecting, preserving, and archiving virtual experiences.

For all our exhibitions, we hold opening events for our Friends and can arrange private tours with USC faculty and staff and curatorial partners. Visit www.usc.edu/libraries/friends for the calendar of upcoming exhibitions and related programming.
